Trixx

Many spirits call home to the rampant wilds that have overgrown the areas between the clans of the yokai. Of these spirits, however, none cause more strife than Trixx, the mischievous kitsune. Trixx takes more than just great pleasure in swindling others, it is what powers his very being. Lots of the other spirits that call home to the forest can be very difficult to fool, leading to a time where Trixx felt weak and helpless. Until one fateful day, when a naive young man was banished from his yokai clan and thrown into these wilds to fend for himself, this none other than Hisoki Souta. Trixx saw this golden opportunity in front of him. Each day Trixx would disguise himself as a beautiful woman and saunter past him, making him think that he wasn't alone out here with the spirits. Hisoki would chase after him trying to get this beautiful woman's attention, but Trixx was sure to not let him catch up. These interactions began taking a toll on Hisoki, and everyday after he would see her, he was starting to feel drained and sick. For unbeknownst to him, Trixx was feasting on his gullibility, and draining his life force to empower himself. Eventually, Hisoki couldn't take it anymore, the solitude had gotten to him as he was falling more and more ill and he knew that if there was another person in the wilds, then he had to speak with her. So one day after one of their usual chases, Hisoki mustered as much of his remaining strength as he could, to dissolve into his kemuri form, and continued to follow the mysterious woman. Once she thought she was alone, she let her guard down and settled back to a normal pace, that's when Hisoki struck. Returning to tangible form and coming out from behind a tree as he grabbed her by the hand.

"Wait - please!", he pleaded with her, "my name is Hisoki and--". It was then that he noticed that her delicate hand had changed into a golden yellow paw. Utterly confused, he looked back up, locking eyes with Trixx. Terror coursed through Hisoki as he gazed into the kitsune's glowing red eyes. With a fiery bite, Trixx quickly crunched down on Hisoki's arm that was holding his paw hostage. "AGHH!", Hisoki cried out in pain as he released Trixx's paw. With the burnt skin on his arm blistering, he fell to ground writhing in pain, as Trixx scampered off deep into the wilds.